Episode 18 - Learning through social connections: The human advantage over google

This month we consider ways to deepen our learning from formal professional development through social connections. Gayle Farrell, our guest, is the President of Siena Consulting, providing multi-stakeholder facilitation, strategic and operational planning, and cross-sectoral partnership development. Gayle describes the unique benefits of “social learning” in the workplace and encourages us to intentionally show up as both learner and teacher in our everyday interactions with our peers.
