

Engaging Skilled Volunteers

Connect with the abundance of talent in your community

Explore practices that support the successful engagement of 'Knowledge Philanthropists', or skilled volunteers, and learn how to proactively plan for, attract, and engage them in your work. From project managers to human resources experts, from business analysts to information technology specialists, community members are eager to contribute their skills to your cause.

In this half-day workshop, you will gain concrete tools and templates to successfully plan for, recruit, and manage Knowledge Philanthropists. By thinking "who?" before "how much?", you can:

- Embrace an abundant mindset and achieve more with less
- Give talented people the opportunity to use their skills to support a cause they believe in
- Strengthen your connection to your community

This workshop is ideal for all not-for-profit leaders

Come away from this workshop with the ability to:

- Describe the benefits of engaging skilled volunteers
- Differentiate between 'knowledge philanthropy', board roles, and traditional volunteer roles
- Identify the issues that can support or hinder the work of skilled volunteers
- Apply tools to manage skilled volunteers

To see if this workshop is currently scheduled, visit our upcoming learning opportunities listing

For more information, please email info@thevantagepoint.ca